

For the Second Consecutive Year, HME Home Health named to Canada's Top Growing Companies List

September 29, 2023 (Richmond, B.C.) – HME Home Health is honoured to announce that they have been named to The Globe and Mail's – Canada's Top Growing Companies list for the second consecutive year. For 2023, ranking at number 388 on the list out of 425, HME has seen a three-year revenue growth of 89%.

"It is a credit to the hard work of our over 120 Team Members that HME has been able to see exceptional growth over the past few years," said Robert Boscacci, HME Home Health's CEO and Co-Founder. "To be recognized by The Globe and Mail – one of Canada's foremost business newspapers, for the second year in a row, is a significant achievement."

Cameron Fleming, HME's CIO and Co-Founder, noted, "Building on our growth in 2022, which saw us open three new locations, in 2023, we've expanded to our seventh location with our newly-opened Richmond Corporate Office."

"Additionally, we've been able to grow our various Divisions through strategic investments in technology, which has enabled us to provide exceptional service to clients across B.C., including to remote First Nations communities," said Fleming.

HME recently also promoted long-time senior leader Michelle Harvey to the position of COO. "It's a real honour for HME to be recognized among Canada's Top Growing Companies, and I look forward to continuing our fast-paced growth in my new role," said Harvey.

HME Home Health currently operates with over 75,000 square feet of office and warehouse space at its B.C. locations and offers a vast array of mobility devices and medical equipment. That includes wheelchairs, power chairs, walkers, hospital beds, mattresses, other durable medical equipment, stairlifts, vertical platform lifts, ramps, and other installed products.
